Case Study 6: Online Shopping Website

Website Design and Development – Case Study Notes

Introduction

An online shopping website allows customers to browse products, compare prices, and place orders through the internet. It provides a convenient shopping experience without requiring customers to visit a physical store.

Objective

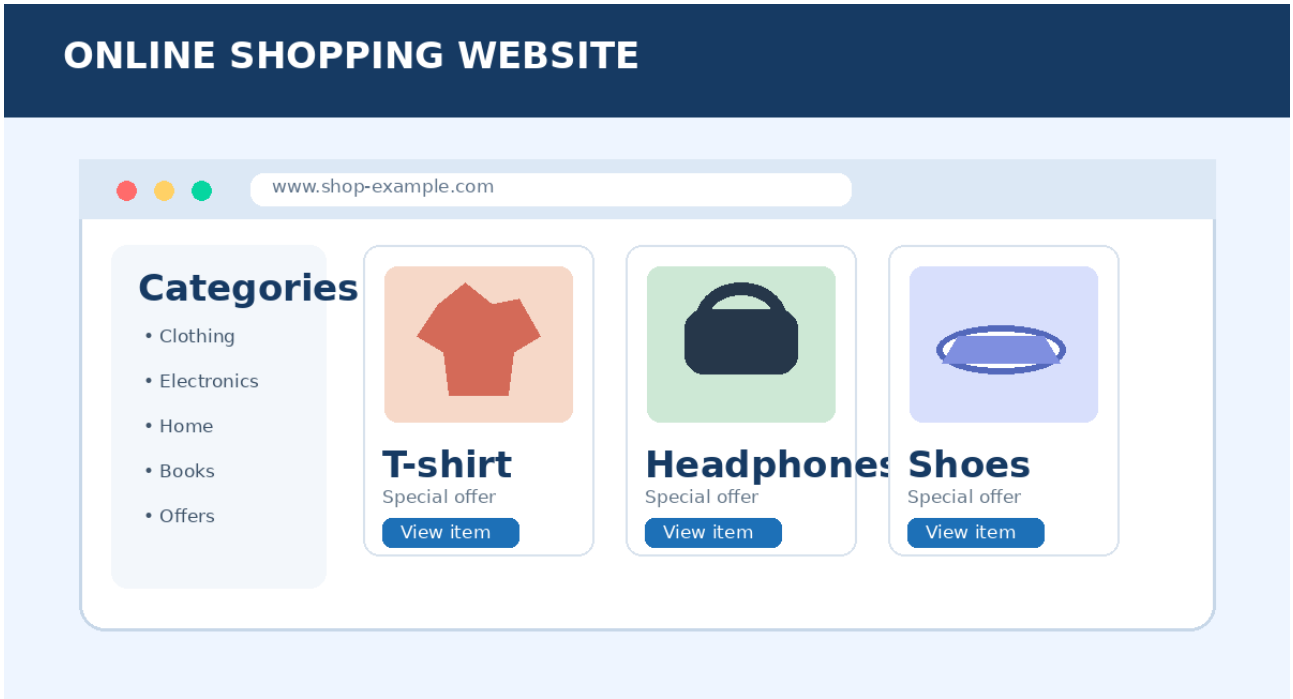

To create a simple and user-friendly online store where customers can find products, view details, and understand available offers.

Main Features

- Product categories such as clothing, electronics, books, and home items.
- Product cards with images, names, prices, and discount labels.
- Search and filtering options to help customers find products.
- Product detail pages with descriptions, sizes, colours, and availability.
- A shopping cart, checkout, and order confirmation in a fully developed system.

Design Considerations

A clear navigation bar, readable text, consistent colours, and responsive product cards make the website easy to use on computers and mobile devices.

Case Study 7: Electronic Store Website

Website Design and Development – Case Study Notes

Introduction

An electronic store website presents technology products such as laptops, smartphones, headphones, smartwatches, and other accessories. Customers can review specifications and compare products before making a purchase decision.

Objective

To organize electronic products in a catalog that makes product information, prices, discounts, and comparisons easy to understand.

Main Features

- Separate categories for laptops, smartphones, accessories, and smart devices.
- Specification details such as processor, RAM, storage, display, and connectivity.
- Discount labels and original versus sale prices.
- Comparison tables for checking important features across products.
- Product detail sections with images, descriptions, and pricing.

Design Considerations

A clean layout, product cards, contrasting discount labels, and a responsive comparison table help visitors scan technical information quickly. The sample illustration and prices in this document are for demonstration.

Case Study 16: Travel Agency Website

Website Design and Development – Case Study Notes

Introduction

A travel agency website helps users explore destinations and plan trips. It can bring together information about flights, hotels, tour packages, transport, and popular attractions in one place.

Objective

To make travel planning simpler by presenting destination information and package options clearly and helping users enquire about or book a trip.

Main Features

- Destination pages with photographs, descriptions, and recommended activities.
- Tour packages showing duration, itinerary, inclusions, and price.
- Flight and hotel information, with date and traveller selection in a complete system.
- Travel offers, customer reviews, and frequently asked questions.
- Contact details and an enquiry or booking form.

Design Considerations

Large destination images, simple menus, clear package cards, and visible enquiry buttons help users navigate the site. A mobile-friendly layout is important because many travellers browse on phones.
